Although people have the right to an attorney in criminal matters, there is no right to civil legal aid. Every day, thousands of Tennesseans interact with the civil justice system. An older person applies for benefits. A homeowner deals with the bank or a mortgage servicer. A domestic violence victim seeks a restraining order. A renter fights unlawful eviction. All of these are civil legal problems and Legal Aid lawyers work to make sure those protections are not violated. LAS provides access to justice with our free civil legal services so that low-income, vulnerable residents have their livelihoods, their health, and their families protected.
